Resident at the iconic Sydney Opera House, the Sydney Symphony Orchestra also performs in venues throughout Sydney and regional New South Wales, and international tours to Europe, Asia and the USA have earned the Orchestra worldwide recognition for artistic excellence.

The Orchestra's first chief conductor was Sir Eugene Goossens, appointed in 1947; he was followed by Nicolai Malko, Dean Dixon, Moshe Atzmon, Willem van Otterloo, Louis Frémaux, Sir Charles Mackerras, Zdeněk Mácal, Stuart Challender, Edo de Waart and Gianluigi Gelmetti. Vladimir Ashkenazy was Principal Conductor from 2009 to 2013, followed by David Robertson as Chief Conductor from 2014 to 2019. Australian-born Simone Young commenced her role as Chief Conductor in 2022, a year in which the Orchestra made its return to a renewed Sydney Opera House Concert Hall. The Sydney Symphony Orchestra's concerts encompass masterpieces from the classical repertoire, music by some of the finest living composers, and collaborations with guest artists from all genres, reflecting the Orchestra's versatility and diverse appeal. Its award-winning education program is central to its commitment to the future of live symphonic music, and the Orchestra promotes the work of Australian composers through performances, recordings and its commissioning program.

MISSY MAZZOLI (BORN 1980)

These Worlds In Us (2006)

These Worlds in Us is an eight-minute exploration of 'worlds of intense memory', beginning with a long sighing violin melody that sometimes swims in a shimmering texture, and breaks into moments of playfulness and contrastingly powerful emotion.

It was composed in 2006, the year the Human Genome Project published the final chromosome sequence, Yogyakarta was hit by a huge earthquake, Pluto demoted from the ranks of the planets.

EDVARD GRIEG (1843–1907)

Piano Concerto in A minor, Op.16 (1868)

A three-movement concerto loved by everyone from Tchaikovsky to Schoenberg, Grieg's piece was composed in 1869. In the same year, the 'Welcome Stranger' gold-nugget is discovered in Victoria, the Suez Canal is inaugurated, Tolstoy publishes, Ludwig II of Bavaria begins his great homage to the operas of Wagner, Neuschwanstein Castle.

ANTONÍN DVOŘÁK (1841–1904)

Symphony No.9, Op.95, From the New World (1893)

Dvořák's most popular symphony (and justly so) is entirely original in its material, but puts into practice much of what he believed should come of the cultural melting-pot that was late-19th century America. While not quoting any extant sources he creates a sense of his own Czech heritage, the vastness of the American prairie, and the music of Native- and African-Americans.

Composed in 1893, the year of Verdi's last opera Falstaff, Oscar Wilde's play Salomé, Tchaikovsky's Sixth Symphony, Edvard Munch's The Scream, works by Toulouse-Lautrec and Cézanne.

ABOUT THE ARTISTS

JOYCE YANG piano

Blessed with ‘poetic and sensitive pianism’ (The Washington Post) and a ‘wondrous sense of color’ (San Francisco Classical Voice), Grammy-nominated pianist Joyce Yang captivates audiences with her virtuosity, lyricism, and interpretive sensitivity.

She first came to international attention in 2005 when she won the silver medal at the 12th Van Cliburn International Piano Competition. The youngest contestant at 19 years old, she took home two additional awards: Best Performance of Chamber Music (with the Takács Quartet), and Best Performance of a New Work.

In the last decade, Yang has blossomed into an ‘astonishing artist’ (Neue Zürcher Zeitung), showcasing her colourful musical personality in solo recitals and collaborations with the world’s top orchestras and chamber musicians through more than 1,000 debuts and re-engagements. She received the 2010 Avery Fisher Career Grant and earned her first Grammy nomination (Best Chamber Music/Small Ensemble Performance) for her recording of Franck, Kurtág, Prokofiev & Schumann with violinist Augustin Hadelich ‘One can only sit in misty-eyed amazement at their insightful flair and spontaneity.’ (The Strad).

In recent years, Yang has focused on promoting creative ways to introduce classical music to new audiences. She served as the Guest Artistic Director for Laguna Beach Music Festival in California, curating concerts that explore the ‘art-inspires-art’ concept – highlighting the relationship between music and dance while simultaneously curating outreach activities to young students.

Born in Seoul, South Korea, Yang received her first piano lesson from her aunt at the age of four. Over the next few years she won several national piano competitions in her native country. By the age of ten, she had entered the School of Music at the Korea National University of Arts, and went on to make a number of concerto and recital appearances in Seoul and Daejeon. In 1997, Yang moved to the United States to begin studies at the pre-college division of The Juilliard School with Dr Yoheved Kaplinsky. During her first year at Juilliard, Yang won the pre-college division Concerto Competition. After winning The Philadelphia Orchestra’s Greenfield Student Competition, she performed Prokofiev’s Third Piano Concerto with that orchestra at just twelve years old. She graduated from Juilliard with special honor as the recipient of the school’s 2010 Arthur Rubinstein Prize, and in 2011 she won its 30th Annual William A Petschek Piano Recital Award. She is a Steinway artist.

MISSY MAZZOLI (BORN 1980)

These Worlds In Us (2006)

Recently deemed ‘one of the more consistently inventive, surprising composers now working in New York’ (New York Times), ‘Brooklyn’s post-millennial Mozart’ (Time Out New York), and praised for her ‘apocalyptic imagination’ (Alex Ross, The New Yorker), Missy Mazzoli has had her music performed by the Kronos Quartet, LA Opera, eighth blackbird, the BBC Symphony, the Minnesota Orchestra, Scottish Opera and many others. # ABOUT THE MUSIC

The poet James Tate, photographed by Elsa Dorfman in 1965.

The composer writes:

The title These Worlds In Us comes from James Tate's 1967 poem The Lost Pilot, a meditation on his father's death in World War II:

(excerpt)

My head cocked towards the sky,
I cannot get off the ground,
and you, passing over again,

fast, perfect and unwilling to tell me that you are doing well, or that it was a mistake that placed you in that world, and me in this; or that misfortune placed these worlds in us.

This piece is dedicated to my father, who was a soldier during the Vietnam War. In talking to him it occurred to me that, as we grow older, we accumulate worlds of intense memory within us, and that grief is often not far from joy. I like the idea that music can reflect painful and blissful sentiments in a single note or gesture, and sought to create a sound palette that I hope is at once completely new and strangely familiar to the listener. The theme of this work, a mournful line first played by the violins, collapses into glissandos almost immediately after it appears, giving the impression that the piece has been submerged under water or played on a turntable that is grinding to a halt. The melodic lines (mouth organs) played by the percussionists in the opening and final gestures mimic the wheeze of a broken accordion, lending a particular vulnerability to the bookends of the work. The rhythmic structures and cyclical nature of the piece are inspired by the unique tension and logic of Balinese music, and the march-like figures in the percussion bring to mind the militaristic inspiration for the work as well as the relentless energy of electronic drum beats.

These Worlds In Us is scored for pairs of flutes, oboes, clarinets and bassoons; four horns, two trumpets, two trombones and tuba; three percussionists, harp and strings.

It was premiered by the Yale Philharmonia on 1 March 2006, with its first professional performance on 1 December of that year, with Osmo Vänskä conducting the Minnesota Orchestra.

This is the first time that the Sydney Symphony Orchestra has performed this work.

ABOUT THE MUSIC

EDVARD GRIEG (1843–1907)

Piano Concerto in A minor, Op.16 (1868)

The young Edvard Grieg

After hearing a performance of Grieg's Piano Concerto, Arnold Schoenberg is supposed to have remarked: 'That's the kind of music I'd really like to write'. It wouldn't have been the first time that Schoenberg's facetious humour was apparent, but one can't help but feel that there was a wistful sincerity buried in the remark. Schoenberg, after all, believed that his experiments, first in atonality and later the twelve-note serial method were forced upon him by historical destiny rather than being the result of his own wishes. He also remarked that there was 'still plenty of good music to be written in C major' and his last word was according to legend, 'Harmony!' Grieg's concerto, while not in C major, is in its close relative A minor, and is certainly full of good music. And it is, with good reason, popular – a fate not enjoyed by Schoenberg's music.

Grieg himself was not so sure however. He composed the concerto at the age of 25 while on holiday in Denmark with his wife and young child, and he was at that stage relatively inexperienced in orchestral writing. In fact the only orchestral works dating from his early life are an 'Overture' which has been lost, and a Symphony in C minor which is hardly ever heard. Grieg tinkered endlessly with the orchestration of his concerto between the time of the work's (triumphant) premiere and his death in 1907.

Grieg had studied at the Leipzig Conservatory from the age of 15 with the initial intent of becoming a concert pianist. Dissatisfied with his first teacher, Grieg began lessons with EF Wenzel, a friend and supporter of Robert Schumann's; under his tutelage Grieg began writing piano music for his own performances and wrote passionate articles in defence of Schumann's music.

The influence of Schumann's Piano Concerto, also in A minor, on Grieg's work has been remarked on frequently, but apart from their similar three-movement design and opening gesture (in both works a full tutti chord of A minor releases a florid response from the keyboard soloist) the style of each is markedly different. Both composers were, however, primarily lyricists, and Grieg's Concerto is certainly replete with exquisite tunes. Many of these echo some of the shapes of Norwegian folk music with which Grieg had become deeply familiar in 1864, when he had become active in a society for the support of Scandinavian music. The piano's opening gesture, for instance, recalls folk music in its use of a 'gapped' scale, and the origins of the finale in folk dance are clear.

ABOUT THE MUSIC

Grieg was unable to attend the premiere of his concerto in Copenhagen in 1869, but it was an outstanding success, no doubt in part because Grieg's cultivation of folk music struck a chord with the increasingly nationalist Scandinavian audiences. But in large part it was because the concerto was recognised as a youthful masterpiece. No less an artist than Anton Rubinstein, who attended the performance, described it as a 'work of genius'. A year later Grieg and his wife travelled to Italy where Grieg met Liszt for the second time. Liszt had been encouraging of Grieg's work some time before; now he allegedly sight-read Grieg's concerto and said 'you have the real stuff in you. And don't ever let them frighten you!'

Grieg didn't let them frighten him, and the Piano Concerto went on to establish his reputation throughout the musical world. Audiences responded, as they still do, to the charm of Grieg's melodies, the balance of (it must be said) Lisztian virtuosity and Grieg's own distinctive lyricism, and what Tchaikovsky, who adored the work, described as the work's 'fascinating melancholy which seems to reflect in itself all the beauty of Norwegian scenery'.

Grieg at the piano

One of Grieg's greatest admirers described the 'concentrated greatness and all-lovingness of the little great man. Out of the toughest Norwegianness, out of the most narrow localness, he spreads out a welcoming and greedy mind for all the world's wares'. This was the Australian-born pianist/composer Percy Grainger who became one of the Grieg Concerto's most celebrated exponents and one of the dearest friends of Grieg's last years. Not only that – Grainger spent time with Grieg working on the concerto before the composer's death, at which time Grieg was making the final adjustments to the orchestration; with such 'inside knowledge' Grainger was able to publish his own edition of the work in later years. Sadly, a proposed tour with Grieg conducting and Grainger playing the Concerto never transpired.

Edvard Grieg's Piano Concerto is scored for pairs of flutes, oboes, clarinets and bassoons; four horns, two trumpets and three trombones; timpani, strings and piano soloist.

The work was premiered in Copenhagen, Denmark, on 3 April 1869, with Holger Simon Paulli conducting and Edmund Neupert as soloist.

The Sydney Symphony's first complete performance of the work occurred in July 1938, with Georg Szell conducting Raymond Lambert; Szell conducted the work again the following year, this time with Laurence G Smith as soloist. Other notable performances include those conducted by Eugene Goossens with Eileen Joyce (May 1948); a Schools Orchestral Concert with Bernard Henize conducting Richard Bonyngne in the first movement (Nov. 1948); Goossens with Raymond Fisher (1955 NSW Regional Tour); Charles Mackerras with Julius Katchen (January 1963); John Hopkins with Percy Grainger (June 1978); Adam Fischer with Peter Jablonski (March 1994); Emmanuel Villaume with Leif Ove Andsnes (March 2002); Manuel Lopez-Garcia with Lang Lang (June 2016) and David Robertson with Kirill Gerstein (August 2019). Also notable were performances with Vladimir Ashkenazy conducting Evgeny Kissin, both in Sydney and on tour to Japan (November 2011), and our current Chief Conductor Simone Young conducting Jon Kimura Parker in just her second appearance with the Orchestra in August 1996.

The Orchestra's most recent performance was in June 2021, with Nicholas Carter conducting Piers Lane.

ABOUT THE MUSIC

ANTONÍN DVOŘÁK (1841–1904)
Symphony No.9, Op.95,
From the New World* (1893)

Antonín Dvořák

Dvořák composed his ninth and last symphony in New York between January and May 1893. As his American-born secretary Josef Kovařík was about to deliver the score to the conductor of the first performance, Anton Seidl, Dvořák suddenly wrote on the title page, in Czech, 'From the New World'. That expression had been used in a welcome speech following his arrival in New York the previous September, reflecting the Christopher Columbus quadricentenary: 'The New World of Columbus and the New World of Music'. Kovařík said the inscription was just 'the Master's little joke'; but the 'joke' has, ever since, begged the question: how American is the New World Symphony?

Dvořák could have written his 'New World' inscription, as in the welcome speech, in English. By writing it in Czech he was seen to be addressing the work, like a picture postcard, to his compatriots back in Europe. At the same time he challenged listeners to identify depictions of America or elements of American music. Either way, the composer was seen to be meeting the desire of his employer, Mrs Jeannette Thurber, for music which might be identified as American.

Mrs Thurber had persuaded Dvořák to become director of her National Conservatory of Music in New York – the most eminent composer ever to take a teaching position in the USA. Besides teaching students from a wide spectrum of society, including women and people of colour, he found he was expected to show Americans how to create a national music. So, controversially and perhaps naively, in a country which had not forgotten the Civil War, the egalitarian Dvořák told Americans they would find their future music in their roots, whether native or immigrant, and in particular the songs of the African-Americans.

From his familiarity with gypsies in Europe, Dvořák had famously composed a set of Gypsy Melodies (including 'Songs my mother taught me'), and was thus receptive when introduced soon after his arrival to the songs of the African-Americans – the sorrow songs and spiritual songs of the plantation. As a devout man of humble rural origins, he responded to the pathos and religious fervour of the poor.

He told the New York Herald that the two middle movements of his new symphony were inspired by Longfellow's epic poem The Song of Hiawatha, a work he had long ago read in Czech and which Mrs Thurber was now suggesting for an opera. The famous slow movement, he said, was inspired by Hiawatha's wooing of Minnehaha and the Scherzo by dancing at the wedding feast. Without using Native American melodies, he claimed to have given the Scherzo 'the local colour of Indian music' – an effect probably limited to repetitive rhythms and primitive harmonies.

At the same time, The New York Daily Tribune, reporting an extensive interview with the composer, declared that America's 'most characteristic, most beautiful and most vital' folksong came 'from the negro slaves of the South', adding that ‘if there is anything Indian about Dr Dvořák’s symphony it is only in the mood...of Indian legend and romance.’

ABOUT THE MUSIC

On superficial acquaintance, Dvořák found that ‘the music of the Negroes and of the Indians was practically identical.’ But he took care to speak only in generalities as the debate, with all its good publicity, flourished.

As music, the New World Symphony is entirely characteristic of its composer (the ‘simple Czech musician’ he liked to style himself) and owes nothing to any specific ‘borrowings’ from the indigenous or African-American musics Dvořák encountered in the New World. The ersatz-spiritual Goin’ home was actually arranged from Dvořák’s Largo movement by one of his students, not the other way around.

There were strong non-musical impressions of America which doubtless crowded the composer’s mind as he worked on the symphony: the frenetic bustle of New York, the seething cauldron of humanity in the metropolis, and the simple folk caught up in the impersonal whirl – the African-Americans, the indigenous Americans, the immigrant poor. The surging flow and swiftly changing moods of the outer movements perhaps reflect these images. The vast, desolate prairies Dvořák found ‘sad unto despair’, and this may be felt to underpin the deep yearning of the Largo (together with the composer’s own homesickness for his native Bohemia). As if to emphasise his personal longing for home, Dvořák uses a Czech dance as the central trio section of the third movement.

Musical ideas recur in the New World Symphony, like familiar faces in a crowd, to link the symphonic structure. The two main themes of the first movement are recalled in festive mood in the Largo, at the brassy climax of the famous melody first stated by the cor anglais. They figure again in the coda of the Scherzo, the first theme (somewhat disguised) also making three appearances earlier in the movement. The main themes of both middle movements recur in the development section of the finale, and the main themes of all three preceding movements are reviewed in the final coda. There, a brief dialogue between the themes of the first and last movements is cut short by a conventional cadence, spiced by unexpected wind colouring in the last chord of all.

Antonin Dvorak’s New World Symphony is scored for two flutes (the second doubling piccolo), two oboes (the second doubling cor anglais), two clarinets and two bassoons; four horns, two trumpets, three trombones and tuba; timpani, percussion and strings.

It was premiered at Carnegie Hall on 16 December 1893, with the New York Philharmonic conducted by Anton Seidl.

The Sydney Symphony Orchestra’s first performance of this work was under conductor Georg Szell in June 1938.
